

- ▶ Global stocks started the week on the up as U.S. and China representatives resume formal trade talks in Beijing. European stocks also rose as a rally in financials outweighed a drop in the European Commission's economic sentiment indicator to a two-year low in April (104.0 points).
- ▶ U.S. sovereign yields rose after positive consumer spending data for March and despite the easing in the Fed's preferred inflation gauge. Headline PCE inflation stood at 1.5% and core PCE inflation nudged down to 1.6% in March.
- ▶ Euro area peripheral spreads declined modestly as markets digested the outcome of Spain's general election and S&P's ratification of Italy's rating at BBB.
- ▶ This morning, Asian stocks continued to advance after the release of China's official PMI figures, which were lower than expected but remained in the expansionary region (manufacturing: 50.1 points; non-manufacturing: 54.3).
